SUSAN HOWE

POETRY (Special Programs March 1975 to March 1976)

Paul Metcalf reading from his work and being interviewed by Mark Weiss about the work and the difficulties of being Herman Melville's great grandson and a writer in his own right.

What the Woman Lived A program consisting of a dramatization of poet Louise Bogan's life recorded in 1975 at the Manhattan Theatre Club. Actress Marion Seldes and Kathryn Walker gave a dramatic reading of Louise Bogan's letters and poems.

Jack Spicer I Selections from Spicer's lecture on Poetry and Politics given at Berkeley and the poet reading his long poems Billy the Kid and the Holy Grail.

Jack Spicer II Selections from Spicer's lecture at Vancouver about the poet receiving messages from "outside" and the poet reading selections from The Book of Magazine Verse and Language.

Five Programs from the Giorno Dial A Poem Poets Series On each program Giorno was interviewed first about the series, and about the poets reading for each separate program. On each program about six poets read one or more of their poems. Some of the poets reading were Allen Ginsberg, Gary Snyder, Charles Olson, Frank O'Hara, John Ashbery, Anne Waldman, Maureen Owen, Bernadette Meyer, Diane diPrima, Ted Berrigan & Aram Saroyan.

V.R. Lang An evening devoted to the late poet V.R. Lang whose Collected Works have just been published by Random House, with a memoir by her friend, novelist Alison Lurie. During the 1950's V.R. Lang was the leading inspiration behind the Poets Theatre in Cambridge Mass. Alison Lurie read from the Memoir, and was interviewed by Charles Ruas and Susan Howe. Novelist Dee Welles, critic Mary Manning, poets John Ashbery and James Merrill also read from her work and discussed their friendships with Lang, and their involvement with the Poets Theatre. This was followed by a production recorded at the station of V.R. Lang's one act verse play I Too Have Lived in Arcadia. Marion Seldes, Ruth Ford, and Earl Hyman played the parts.

William Carlos Williams A tape from the Pacifica Archives of Williams giving a reading in 1956 at Berkeley. Many of his finest poems were read that evening by the poet. The reading ends with Asphodel That Greeny Flower and it could never be more beautifully read.

William Carlos Williams An interview with Reed Whittemore, poet and author of William Carlos Williams - Poet from Jersey. Also interviewed will be the poet's son William Eric Williams.
